Idilus Announces Expansion to Provide Needed Healthcare Resources

February 18, 2011 - Idilus, LLC, a leader in healthcare consulting, continues to bridge the gap between traditional healthcare processes and the technological advances occurring in the marketplace. Idilus is expanding its team of talented professionals to supply resources and expertise to hospitals, physicians' practices and electronic medical record companies to adjust to the changing climate of the medical industry.

Idilus CEO Michael Colucci, who has over 35 years of experience in healthcare, stated, "We have taken this step of assembling a diverse team of professionals to address what we believe to be a critical and growing need in the selection and deployment of hospital and physician information systems."

The team is comprised of a physician informaticist with experience in office-based and hospital-based systems; a large hospital IT executive with experience in the deployment of total hospital information systems and a mechanical engineer with over 20 years of experience in the use of Lean Six Sigma tools. In addition the team also includes an industrial engineer with over 15 years of experience in network development, support, database management, and implementation; a process implementation specialist with over 10 years of experience in project management, graphic design, EMR template design, and graduate training in conflict resolution and a registered nurse and data specialist with specific training in EMR setup, implementation and training and the analysis of medical practice quantitative information. This implementation team is supported by 4 technology executives who have over 80 years combined experience in information technology.

"The development of this team, along with our existing expertise in healthcare financial and medical practice management and operations, uniquely positions Idilus to assist hospitals and medical practices and best in class vendors who supply this essential technology."

Founded in 1999, Idilus is an influential and growing force in helping physicians, and the hospitals where they work, do what they do best: care for patients and practice medicine.
